NEGROES STEAL TWO BICYCLES FROM THE MOKENA SCHOOL

Deputy Walter Fisher was notified Wednesday afternoon about 4:30 o'clock that two young colored men had stolen two bicycles from the school house in Mokena, the wheels belonging to the sons of F. M. Story and W. D. Roberts. Mr. Fisher took up the trace of the thieves and trailed them to Orland and from there to the Palos Park road where he met some Cook County Highway police and told them of the robbery and they said they would take up the chase from Palos. They believed the thieves had headed for Argo. One other bicycle at the school had a chain and lock on it so it was not touched.

McMahon of Mokena was called and took the most seriously injured ones to St. Joseph's hospital at Joliet. The other two men were taken to the camp.

NEGROES HOLD UP ORLAND POST OFFICE AND SHOOT AT POSTMASTER SCHMAEDKE; MAKE ESCAPE

The greatest excitement that Orland has had in a decade, occurred late Saturday night when the news spread like lightning that the Orland post office had been held up and robbed and that postmaster J. F. Schmaedke had been shot at.

It was about nine o'clock and Mr. Schmaedke was preparing to close for the night when two well dressed negroes walked into the store and asked for some cigarettes. Mr. Schmaedke was just handing the package to his supposed customer when suddenly he faced two 32 caliber revolvers held in the hands of the negroes who told him to duck behind the counter which he did. Thereupon the robbers rifled the cash drawer of its contents and also took $285 from the post office cash drawer besides many checks. The exact amount which was taken is not known.

Fire on Postmaster

Not content with the money they got, the bandits fired a shot thru the counter at Mr. Schmaedke, the shot grazing his knee inflicting a slight flesh wound.

ORLAND MAN'S BED CATCHES FIRE

On Sunday morning at 2 o'clock Mr. Ted Graski suddenly awoke to find himself engulfed in flames. His cot had caught fire from some unknown cause.

The Village Board meeting was held on October 10. Quite a number of important issues were discussed and also settled.

Due to the untiring efforts of Mayor Raschke the water main question was definitely settled. The public school and the Christ Lutheran Parochial school with their hundred pupils will soon have fresh drinking water and sanitary lavatories.

Signs will be placed on the main streets leading into town designating the speed limits and muffler ordinance.

The ordinance for licensing was given to Mr. Archie Kay to read over, study and report on at the next meeting.

Rev. W. C. Greve has been enabled to procure splendid signs to place on our highways to denote the location of the schools. The signs are in the shape of our national emblem and have the following in raised type: "Drive slowly school. Illinois Automobile Club." These signs will be given free of charge to the various school directors by the Illinois Automobile Club.

Adolph Zerbs has been appointed official garage and service for the Illinois Auto Club. Mr. Zerbs will maintain a 24 hours service for Club members only.

Mrs. W. C. Greve and Mrs. Raschke went shopping Tuesday in Chicago.

The telephone in the village hall will have an extension to George Vogt's so that in case of fire he can be notified to begin pumping.

Saturday the last barricade was removed from 143rd Street (Orland Ave.)

Mrs. John Ducher is still on the sick list. Dr. Snider of Blue Island is attending her.

Adolph Zerbs has begun work at his new garage to be built at 143rd street and the Wabash tracks.

Use Machine Gun in Trailing

The robbers made a quick getaway. Postmaster Schmaedke immediately called up Mayor Raschke and told him what had happened. He in turn called up the highway police from Homewood. In about 25 minutes 15 men arrived heavily armed with revolvers and shotguns. They also had a machine gun mounted on a motor truck. They went to Marley and searched the colored camp along the Wabash railroad in the hope of finding the bandits, but no trace was found of them. All the neighboring towns and cities were notified of the robbery and the deputies watched the various roads, the robbers escaped.

The authorities are working on the case as well as the Federal authorities and it is said they have found a good clue which may eventually lead to the apprehension of the bandits.

What Orland needs since the road is opened is police protection. Let us hope the village council finds some way of providing ample protection to our stores and people.

The Brown Mouse

By HERBERT QUICK

Here is one of the most original stories in the world; a novel as entertaining as it is instructive; a regular thought-awakener containing action, romance, humor, real character studies and a love interest. It is not about mice but about people, their problems, ambitions, emotions and affections. The author simply had a happy thought when he took a brown mouse and applied its characteristics to a human.

TINLEY PARK MAN GETS INTERESTING LETTER FROM GERMANY; BARTER NOW TAKES PLACE OF MONEY

George Schreiber, Tinley Park's so he has been obliged to tear out a well known shoe man is in receipt of a letter from his niece in Muelhausen, Germany in which she gives a very graphic and comprehensive account of conditions as they exist in Germany today. A pound of meat costs 36,000,000 marks and Knupp opening a market in the a pound of lard costs 30,000,000 marks and a person is considered very fortunate if he can get both flagman job at the Rock Island crossing west of the depot succeeding 8,000,000 marks. An ordinary handkerchief sells at 10,000,000 marks, ed.

Tinley Park has another new list in Germany today. A pound of butter costs 36,000,000 marks and Knupp opening a market in the a pound of lard costs 30,000,000 marks and a person is considered very fortunate if he can get both flagman job at the Rock Island crossing west of the depot succeeding 8,000,000 marks. An ordinary handkerchief sells at 10,000,000 marks, ed.

The shoemakers charge from 30,000,000 to 40,000,000 marks for half soling a pair of shoes. Money has so little value that it is not being used much any more, barter of articles being resorted to instead. Postage stamps are not being used any more as it would take more space than there is on both sides of an ordinary envelope to hold all the stamps that would have to be affixed to a letter as it costs 200,000 marks to send a letter from Germany to America. The postal department in Germany now merely stamps the date of mailing on the letter together with a notation that the postage fee has been paid by the sender at the office of mailing. At that rate it would be pretty expensive to send love letters.

About the hardest problem is that of fuel as no coal can be purchased at any price since the French have seized the Ruhr coal mines.

Wm. Schoeneck figured in a serious auto accident Tuesday noon. He just left the farm taking his wife to Tinley to take a train to the city when he suddenly saw a car coming in the opposite direction. There is a sharp turn in the road at this point and the view is obstructed by a hedge so neither driver could see the other until they were nearly on top of each other. Mr. Schoeneck had no chance to avoid an accident as it was a case of either hitting the other car or taking the ditch himself, so he took the latter course. The car shot off the highway down into a 3 foot ditch. Two children that were also in the car were quite badly cut in their faces and about their heads. Mr. Schoeneck was also bruised and badly shaken up. Mr. Joe Norton who was driving the Ford which Mr. Schoeneck tried to avoid hitting, picked up the passengers of the ditched car and took them home. He was from Joliet. The ditched car was quite badly damaged. The accident occurred on the gravel road about a mile and a half southwest of Tinley Park.

HAS NARROW ESCAPE

As she was driving a new Chevrolet car out of the driveway at her home onto the concrete road she was unable to see a heavy milk truck approaching because of another truck that was being parked on the wrong side of the street and as she got onto the concrete and was about to turn she ran into a swift moving truck. One front wheel was torn off the car, the fender was bent and a few other parts battered. Luckily Mrs. Bettenhausen and her little daughter who was with her escaped injury.

The president of the committee is Paul Leon, director of fine arts.

A. F. OF L. CASTS OUT RED LEADER

William F. Dunne, Communist, Dumped Overboard by Union Labor's Convention.

DELEGATE'S EXIT IS DRAMATIC

Butte, Mont., Editor Is Branded as Representative of Russia by a Vote of 27,838 to 130 in Block Balloting.

Portland, Ore.—William F. Dunne, Communist leader from the Silver Bow labor council of Butte, Mont., was expelled from the convention of the American Federation of Labor after one of the most dramatic debates heard in that forum for years.

Dunne's strength only mustered six votes on the final roll call. The record vote as announced was 27,838 to 130, but this refers to blocks of votes, not individuals. There were about fifty-two delegates absent or not voting in the total of 378 present.

It was not necessary for the so-called "Gompers machine" to do any steam rolling. The delegates themselves took care of Dunne.

When the vote was announced President Gompers announced in his most impressive manner:

"Delegate Dunne stands impeached and his credentials as a member of this convention are revoked. Mr. Dunne will please retire from the hall."

There was a stir of excitement which the aged president soon quieted with firm blows of his new gavel of Oregon myrtle wood.

"Good by, Mr. Chairman and delegates," said the athletic looking, blue-shirted, young Red, picking up his books and papers, and making for the door. "I will meet you at the barricades."

This expulsion brought the whole Red question into focus and unmistakably stamped the temper of the convention on all the questions of similar character to come before it this week.

The impeachment of Dunne was made by William Green, secretary of the United Mine Workers, in the course of a four-hour discussion of the Red problem and its menacing import to the trade union movement. "I impeach this man in the name of the workers of America before this great bar of trade union power and authority, as spokesman for the United Mine Workers of America," said Green from the platform.

Dunne is under indictment with W. Z. Foster for violation of the Michigan anti-syndicalism law.

CHILDLESS HOMES MADE HAPPY

Presence of Little Ones a Great Blessing

Four Interesting Letters

Cortland, N. Y.—"I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound because I was weak and wanted to become strong and have a child. My husband read about it in the 'Cortland Standard' and thought it might help me. It certainly did for I now have a lovely boy fifteen months old who weighs forty pounds. I recommend Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to my friends and you can certainly use my testimonial in your little books and in the newspapers, as it might help to make some other childless home happy by the presence of little ones as it has done mine."—Mrs. CLAUDE P. CANFIELD, 10 Salisbury St., Cortland, N. Y.

A Message to Mothers

Hamilton, Ohio.—"I have known about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound since girlhood, having taken it when I was younger and suffering from a weakness and backache. Lately I have taken it again to strengthen me before the birth of my child, as I was troubled with pains in my back and a lifeless, weak feeling. I think if mothers would only take your wonderful medicine they would not dread childbirth as they do. I recommend the Vegetable Compound to every woman."—Mrs. JOS. FALCONE, JR., 552 S. 11th Street, Hamilton, Ohio.

St. Louis, Mo.—"I want to tell you what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound did for me seven years ago. I was run down and had a weakness such as women often have. I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and after being married sixteen years became the mother of a sweet little girl. I now have four lovely children—three fine boys and the little girl six years old. I had longed for children all the while and wept many a day and envied every woman with a child. I was 36 years old when my first baby was born. I recommend Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to any woman who is ailing with female weakness."—Mrs. J. NAUMANN, 1517 Benton St., St. Louis, Mo.

Was Weak and Run Down

St. Louis, Mo.—"My mother took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound when I was a girl, and when I was troubled with cramps I took it, and later when I married I again took it to make me strong as the doctor said I was weak and run down and could not have children. I took it and got along fine and now I have three girls. So you know why I keep the Compound in the house. I am a well woman and do my work and sewing too."—Mrs. JULIUS HARTMAN, 2501 W. Dodier St., St. Louis, Mo.

DAM RIVER TO STOP FLOOD

Barrage Type Constructed in South Africa to Prevent Collecting of Mud in Reservoir.

After seven years of building, a dam that stops a 40-mile river in South Africa was recently completed. A barrage type was chosen to prevent collecting of mud and earth in the reservoir and to avoid flooding of private property on the river banks. In the average year enough dirt is carried down this river to cover 720 acres a depth of six inches. Passing through tanks and filters and being treated with chemicals clears the water. Thirty-six sluice gates control the huge barrage, 1,400 feet long. When full, the depth of the water will be 25 feet. At the formal opening a British prince officiated.—Popular Mechanics.

What a Mean Slap!

Poet—Would that my muse might soar aloft and, cleaving the empyrean blue, find words to sing the glories of your hair of burnished gold.

Maiden—(Titian-haired, but prosaic): That sounds very pretty, Mr. Scribbler, but do you know the difference between your poems and my hair?

Poet—Ah, a conundrum. I give it up. What is the difference, O fairest of your sex?

Maiden—Well, my hair's red.—Stray Stories.

Carrying Scandals.

To carry scandals and evil reports to others is like poisoning the water you would give them to drink.

A Three-Year-Old's Ambition.

Little Sam Miller, aged three, son of Sidney Miller of Rainbow fame, has an eye to the future and will no doubt follow in the steps of his father should war come.

When his father was arraying himself in the panoply of war in preparation for the Rainbow parade, little Sam was a most interested spectator. He noted the well-pressed khaki suit, and the Sam Browne belt neatly adjusted, the overseas cap well on one side of the head, and sighed. Running over to his mother he said:

"Honey, I wish I could grow big feet and be a Rainbow."

Edible Drinking Cup Appears.

With the increase in popularity of water ices among patrons of refreshment pushcarts, bal' park caterers and other vendors the edible drinking cup is appearing. It is of graham cracker ingredients and some are lined with chocolate.

Early in the season water ices were served in paper or paraffin cups. As these were not consumable they created a problem of litter. The new kind of cup, like the cone for ice cream, provides a cake for the water ice. It is also finding a field as a container and accompaniment for soft drinks.—New York Sun and Globe.

Technicality.

An alleged dope peddler in Frisco had his stomach pumped by government officials to see if he had swallowed any dope. Now he claims his rights were violated because he was forced to give evidence against himself.

Why take the risk?

MANY have found by their own experience that coffee's effect is harmful. Health authorities warn against risking the growth and development of children with the drug element in coffee.

Trade Revival Vital to U. S. Far away, but eventually affects your pocketbook: Great Britain, in the first six months of 1923, exported more than three times as much coal as in the first six months of last year. Also, correspondingly, nearly four times as much iron and steel, eight times as much cotton goods and nearly six times as much woollens. An English revival of trade is important to us because her ability to pay what she owes Uncle Sam depends largely on her export markets.

American Farm Bureau

"The Girl From Old Kentucky" is a back number as a song hit, but these girls from "Old Kentucky" are the up-to-date representatives of the girls in the "Blue Grass" state.

They are the champion demonstration team of girls' club work, recently winning over a host of others. Their demonstration shows the value of milk and milk products, which they prove with equal agility, either in the kitchen or on the athletic field.

CO-OPERATIVE IDEA IS BIGGEST PROBLEM

Story of American Movement Is Told by Herman Steen.

Co-operative marketing is the biggest question in American agriculture today. It is the subject of discussions in the messages of presidents and governors; it is the topic of conversation in the cross-roads grocery. More than 800,000 American farmers have signed contracts to market their crops co-operatively, and last year more than $1,000,000,000 worth of farm products went to market through co-operative channels—a fivefold increase in ten years. At the present rate of progress this figure will be doubled in two more years.

All these facts—and many more—are told in a book on co-operative marketing just off the presses, written by Herman Steen and issued under the auspices of the American Farm Bureau federation. It tells the story of the American co-operative movement—how and why it started, how and why it grew, its failures and its successes. The author wastes no time in propaganda or theoretical discussion or abusing the middleman—he tells the story of 100 of the leading co-operative associations in the United States and Canada, carefully chosen for importance to the movement. Every important farm commodity is represented in this volume, and so is nearly every state and province in the United States and Canada. Furthermore, these stories of actual operation of co-operative marketing associations are written by an experienced writer, and they are as easy to read as the latest novel.

This new book, "Co-operative Marketing: The Golden Rule in Agriculture," fills a long-felt want for definite, dependable, carefully compiled information on co-operative marketing. It is valuable because it summarizes practically all the American experience on the subject and presents it in a form easy to grasp and understand; it is valuable because it analyzes failures as well as conspicuous successes; and it is valuable because it presents the philosophy of successful co-operative marketing as the author sees it after visiting nearly every important co-operative association in North America. It ought to be in the hands of every farmer, rural banker and farm leader who now belongs to a co-operative association or who is interested in the movement.

Copies of this 386-page well-bound book may be obtained, postage prepaid, by addressing the American Farm Bureau Federation, 58 East Washington street, Chicago.

ENGLAND IS SALES MANAGER

Man Engaged for Years in Cotton Trade at New Orleans to Handle Louisiana Output.

A. S. England, for several years engaged in the foreign and domestic cotton trade in New Orleans, has been employed as sales manager for the Louisiana Farm Bureau Cotton Growers' association, according to the announcement by President Andrew Querbes of the association. Mr. England assumed his duties at the general offices in Shreveport on July 15.

In announcing this appointment, Mr. Querbes said: "The association is to be congratulated upon the successful negotiation of a contract with Mr. England. I believe that his connection with the selling agency will be of immense benefit to the farmers who are affiliated with it."

The selection of the sales manager completes the executive force of the cotton association, which will handle the cotton produced by more than 5,000 farmers of Louisiana this year, and anticipates doing a co-operative business of more than $10,000,000.

URGES ACREAGE CUT FOR WINTER WHEAT

Gray Silver Would Make Cut 20 Per Cent Instead of 15.

"If the farmers are going to make a serious effort to reduce the wheat acreage they should cut their winter wheat acreage 20 per cent instead of the 15 per cent which they indicated recently to the Department of Agriculture they expected to do," says Gray Silver, Washington representative of the American Farm Bureau federation.

"It is too early to state how much of a reduction should be made in the spring sown crop but it will be time to do this after it is certain what acreage the farmers actually have sown to winter wheat and its condition. The winter wheat crop comprises two-thirds of our entire wheat acreage and therefore it is most important from the standpoint of reduction of acreage."

"If there should be very little winter killing—and the abandonment of acreage from that cause varies from 2 to 30 per cent—there would not necessarily be a material or even any reduction in yield next year if the reduction in acreage sown amounts only to 15 per cent. We should make sure that the acreage is much smaller than a year ago."

"The American Farm Bureau federation along with numerous other agencies for some time has been urging upon the farmers the necessity for adjusting wheat production in response to consumptive demand and thus eliminating to a considerable degree the surplus wheat which annually breaks our markets and makes us largely dependent upon the world price for that commodity. It makes us compete with the Indian labor and coolie labor, the virgin lands of Argentina, and the cheap lands of Canada. The production of a surplus of any commodity is a waste!"

SMALL SACKS FOR POTATOES

Ohio Growers Aim Particularly to Supply Demand for Extra Quality Baking Tubers.

Placing of Ohio produced products in the best kind of package for consumer use is being planned by two groups of growers who are co-operating in marketing their products, according to announcement made by the Ohio Farm Bureau Federation. The two products to be handled in this fashion are fruit and potatoes. Potato growers in two sections in north-eastern Ohio are considering the placing of some of their extra quality product in small sacks for sale to special trade. The potatoes packed in this fashion will be uniform in size, and aimed particularly to supply the demand for extra quality baking potatoes. This plan has been used successfully by potato growers of other states.

SELLING MAINE POTATO CROP

The first cars of cobs from Maine were moved this month by the Federated Growers; movement light, despite favorable weather for rapid maturity during August. Digging was not heavy until September 10 to 15, according to advice received here from operating officials of the exchange.

LESSON FOR OCTOBER 14

ISRAEL, A MISSIONARY NATION

LESSON TEXT—Exod. 19:1-6; Isa. 43:9-11; Isa. 45:20-22.
GOLDEN TEXT—"Ye shall be unto me a kingdom of priests and an holy nation."—Exod. 19:6.

PRIMARY TOPIC—God's Kindness to His People.
JUNIOR TOPIC—Why God Chose Israel.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—The Mission of the Chosen People.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Israel's Missionary Call.

Israel's Exalted Position (Exod. 19:1-6).

The descendants of Abraham had now become a multitude and the time had come to organize them into a nation. In order to enable them to see what a wonderful privilege was theirs, God displayed His majesty on Mount Sinai. In His message to them, He gave them a look backward and forward.

1. A Review of Their Past History (v. 4). He reminds them of what He had done to the Egyptians when He brought them out of their cruel bondage, and that His divine care over them had been as that of an eagle over her young. He had not merely brought them out of Egyptian bondage, but into Himself. God's salvation is not merely deliverance from sin, but a union with Himself.

2. Promises of Future Greatness (vv. 5, 6). On condition of obedience to His voice, and faithfulness to their covenant obligations, He promised them a peculiar relationship to Him. This relationship is three-fold:

(1) The Lord's Peculiar Treasure Above All People. This is the treasure of Matt. 13:44. If this is recognized, the parable is quite clear. Failure to allow Scripture to interpret Scripture results in confusion.

(2) A Kingdom of Priests. "A Kingdom whose citizens are all priests living wholly in God's service and ever enjoying the right of access to Him." In this kingdom there is united sacerdotal privilege and royal dignity.

(3) A Holy Nation. A nation set apart for the work of God. Realizing this, they would be impelled to a standard of living which would be worthy of their high calling. Separation from sin and a positive stand for the right would always be demanded. The failure of this chosen nation is largely the explanation of the world's distress. Had Israel shown the nations the way to go, they would not have gone so far into sin.

II. Israel's Pressing Obligation (Isa. 43:9-11).

1. God's Challenge to the Heathen Nations (v. 9). They were asked to assemble their witnesses to see if they were able to make known the future as God had done through the prophets of Israel. They are either to make good their predictions or to acknowledge the truth as declared by God's prophets, namely, that God is the only God.

2. Israel, God's Witness (v. 10). This nation had been brought so clearly into touch with God, had so many times experienced His mighty hand to deliver, that they were competent witnesses. Not only the nation was a witness, but the prophets from that nation had so many times witnessed and their predictions were so completely fulfilled that the whole world knew that God was the one and only God and Savior. The only way the world can know that God is a forgiving God is through the witnessing of His redeemed people. How sorely this testimony is needed! How miserable has been Israel's failure!

III. Israel's Message (Isa. 45:20-22).

The message which Israel was to give was that God was the Savior of all the nations. Israel misinterpreted and misapplied this message. They claimed Him as their God and denied Him to the heathen. Though they have thus failed and the world is in darkness because of it, one day they shall go to the ends of the earth with it, and the result will be the ushering in of the Golden Age of which men of all ages have dreamed.

1. The Idolatrous Nations Are Invited to Draw In.
2. They Are Challenged to Bring Their Reasons for Worshipping Idols in the Light of the Fact That God the Savior Was the Only God.

3. They Are Given an Invitation to Look Unto God. They were not asked to do something to be saved, but to look to the Savior. Sinners today need only to look to Christ. What a wonderful day when Israel shall declare this message to all nations in the power of the Holy Spirit!

God's Promise.

God hath promised pardon to him that repenteth, but he hath not promised repentance to him that sinneth.—St. Anselm.

Friendship.

Friendship is the nearest thing we know to what religion is. God is love.—Henry Drummond.

A Fool's Coat.

A fool may have his coat embroidered with gold, but it is a fool's coat still.—Rivarol.

A High Reward

By REV. J. R. SCHAFER, Acting Superintendent of Men, Moody Bible Institute, Chicago.

TEXT—And the Lord went His way, as soon as He had left communing with Abraham.—Gen. 18:23.

Faith is the invisible energy that relates the spiritual life of the believer to God. "By grace are ye saved through faith."

"But as many as received Him, to them gave He power to become the children of God, even to them that believe on His name." Obedience is always the manifested conduct of the unseen faith that produces it. But it is one thing to be a child of God, another to be an obedient child. Faith opens to us the inexhaustible treasures of the divine wealth—obedience appropriates them in service. The measure of obedience differentiates Christians. God longs to bestow His best upon all His children, but He is hindered by unwillingness, selfishness, stupidity. He cannot give more than we can receive. Our capacity is limited because our faith is dwarfed and undeveloped. Abram obeyed God's new call. God rewarded his obedience by admitting him to three marvelous privileges in the life of faith:

1. An Angelic Appearance of God (v. 1). "And the Lord appeared unto him, and he lifted up his eyes and looked and lo, three men stood by him." This was a different method of divine revelation. God appeared in distinct form, the same as that of two companions, and presented himself at the door of Abram's tent on the plains of Mamre. The three were angels, yet they looked like men; heavenly, yet they spoke the language of earth and conformed to its conditions; spiritual, yet they ate material food. Here was a reality that brought God so very near, down into the common plane of human conditions, even to the acceptance of human hospitality. This was a new kind of comradeship, quite different from solitude, contemplation and spiritual ecstasy. It was a wondrous foreshadowing of the incarnation—the mystery life of God as man living His life in earthly conditions. How near Christ has come to men, but nearer still does He come to us as He relieves His earthly life in us today, as we trust and obey.

II. Communicated Heaven's Secret (v. 17). "Shall I hide from Abraham the thing which I do?"

The beautiful city of Sodom with its prosperity, its power and vast possibilities for truth and righteousness, had become a place of pleasure and prodigality. The cup of iniquity was full—it could not continue in its vile corruptness. As the breeding place of a loathsome infection, it must be destroyed. Drunk with pleasure, delirious with success, it was all unsuspecting. God confided to Abraham the awful secret of what He must do. He wanted to share His burden with a man, His friend. On Abraham, what a privilege to be the confidant of God! Blessed foreshadowing of the day when Jesus said: "Henceforth I call you not servants; for all things that I have heard of my Father I have made known unto you."

God has told us His secrets. Among them is His plan of the ages—the future of this world. What is His estimate of it? Is it a Sodom? You cannot learn God's estimate of the world from the world. Alone with God, walking before Him in obedience is the place of revealed secrets. He confides to His friends what He will do. They have an understanding of His word that makes them intelligent.

III. Intercession for the Imperiled (v. 31). "Behold now, I have taken upon me to speak unto the Lord."

This is a third privilege of great value. To plead with God for the salvation of men transcends all other opportunities, it links us to the compassionate heart of God more closely than any other service we can render. We instinctively cry to God for the salvation of sinners when God reveals His secrets to us. God confides in us when we walk before Him in the light of His word and obey when He speaks. This is the source of intercessory prayer—a great staggering burden for the unsaved. Abraham could plead for Sodom because He was not a part of it, was unaffected by its affairs, had no investments in it. Only the Christian, untainted by the world, can conscientiously intercede for the world's lost sinners. Separation is the only sure insulation for the current of prayer power. This is the condition of intercessory prayer.

Abraham prayed. Lot and his family were delivered out of the doomed city. "Prayer changes things." Nothing but prayer will change the sinful heart and save the doomed sinner. We need intercessors, children of God who have been called to this high reward for obedience, selected to learn the divine secrets that will impel them to pray, to stand before God representing the lost and pleading the cause of guilty sinners. Who will obey? God calling still, shall I not hear? Lord, teach us to pray.

Self-Denial.

There is more heroism in self-denial than in deeds of arms.—Seneca.

Why Not?

If certain medicinal spring waters benefit human beings why should they not be good for horses who have similar bodily structures? So thought a well-known English horse trainer and his alling horses at Doncaster are now being supplied with water from the famous Harrogate springs, in spite of laughter of his friends. Did not Epsom salts originate in a spring near the famous race course at Epsom? And is there any significance in that fact?

Health is the Most Valuable Asset You Have

Newago, Mich.—"Some years ago I was troubled with dizziness, palpitation, loss of appetite and sore and painful stomach. I tried the best physicians I could hear of, and also several put-up medicines, but nothing did me any good. Some physicians said it was my heart; some said it was my stomach; while others said it was my nerves. I got so bad I could not work very steadily, when a friend came to see me and insisted upon my trying Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. I was discouraged, but tried it anyway, and after taking the second bottle I felt much better. I then bought six bottles and I believe the 'Discovery' saved my life. It was rightfully named 'Golden Medical Discovery.' I would recommend it to all who need such a medicine.—Chas. E. Backus.

Autumn Means New Clothes What Will They Cost? How Will They Look?

There's solid satisfaction in answering these questions for the woman who makes her own clothes. They will look—all these fascinating new garments—just as she wants them to look, down to the least detail of trimming.

They will cost—a whole new supply of pretty things—no more than she wants to spend.

All because she makes them herself, according to just the designs and with just the fabrics she chooses—and she makes them successfully because she uses the McCall Printed Patterns — so marvelously simple that sewing becomes a pleasure, and so modish that the styles of Paris are every woman's for the taking.

And here are a few suggestions of the season's most desired fabrics, all specially priced in the Remodeling Sale:

Vella Vella—36 inches wide—is unequalled for beautiful frocks. And there's plenty of navies, browns, black and grays to select a shade to your liking. Priced $4.95; this week $4.19

He came upon the five men so suddenly and silently that they were startled. He laughed at that. The laugh made even those careless brutes shiver and fall still.

"Wright—the mate—is asleep?" he asked softly.

"Yes."

"And the steward also?"

"Yes."

"No need to worry about him," Petit Jean chuckled, then stabbed with his finger at two of the men. "You, and you, lift that fool Fortier and set him in the canoe alongside. Then cast off the canoe and let it float away. See that you make no sound doing it."

"But—he knows—" protested one.

"He knows nothing of us!" said Petit Jean quickly. "Let him live or die—what matter to us? But he'll go out to sea on the tide. Now, go!"

Two of the men rose and slipped away. Petit Jean leaned forward and spoke very softly to the other three. They uttered low-breathed oaths of admiration. Petit Jean lit a cigarette and inhaled it. Presently the first two came back.

"It is done," said one of them. "The canoe went with the current at once."

Again Petit Jean leaned forward and spoke. More low oaths. Then he rose to his feet.

"You understand perfectly?"

A low chorus of assent. He dropped his cigarette and stepped on it.

"Very well. You Alcee, go and inform M'sieu Macarty that Fortier wishes to speak with him at once."

The man designated slipped back to the companionway. After him, a veritable shadow, went the figure of Petit Jean.

Perhaps three minutes of silence ensued. Then the scrape of feet from below, and the brandy-shot voice of David Macarty rose puffingly.

"Give that varrier a piece of my mind! I'll show him something—"

Through the companionway rose the head and shoulders of David Macarty. The arm of Petit Jean swung slightly; there was a dull sound, and David Macarty stopped moving. From his lips came a grunt of expelled breath. Then his head sagged, and seemed about to fall backward, except that the body was supported from below.

"Up with him!" said Petit Jean calmly, and caught Macarty's collar.

The man below shoved, and Petit Jean pulled. An instant later, the senseless Macarty lay on deck, while Petit Jean was going through his pockets and transferring money and papers and keys. Then Jean rose.

"Not badly hurt," he said, and glanced around. Four other shadows hovered close at hand—the four other men. To one of them Hennepin handed the keys he had just taken.

"Go lock the door of Wright's cabin. Lock the steward in also. The rest of you get him gagged and tied."

Above the figure of David Macarty worked the silent shadows. They gagged the unfortunate man cruelly, and bound him. Then over his head one threw a ragged coat, another threw a shirt about his body. These were bound about with cord, so that the man resembled a wrapped mummy.

"All right," said Petit Jean, and went down the companionway.

He came back into the little saloon cabin, where Felix Macarty sat beneath the light-cluster at the table, and whistled between his teeth as he came. Felix glanced up at him, not without a trace of suspicion in the smoldering eyes.

"How the devil did that fellow Fortier get free of his gag?"

Petit Jean Hennepin lifted his brows, shrugged carelessly as though to intimate that the question could not be answered, and sat down at the table. He put forth his hand and drew toward him the smaller box, that in which reposed the pearls and the diamond. Felix Macarty watched him like a hawk, saw that he wished only to gaze and made no objection.

As he looked, once more the eyes of Petit Jean dilated and flamed, then narrowed into crafty slits of evil light. Suddenly he lifted his head, startled. From the deck above there sounded the stamping of feet, an oath, a wild cry—then a splash alongside.

"The devil!" exclaimed Petit Jean. "What's that?"

Felix Macarty darted forward his long arm, seized upon the smaller box, and closed it. He closed the larger one also. Swift as light, he shoved them into the pocket of his coat, and whipped out an automatic pistol.

Swift as he was, however, he had barely come to his feet when the door was burst open and one of the men appeared there—the man Alcee.

"M'sieu Macarty!" gasped the man, his horrified eyes on Felix. "The prisoner—that Fortier—had a knife—he stabbed your father—"

With a wild oath, Felix Macarty brushed the man aside and leaped for the ladder.

As he came out on deck, Felix saw the shapes of several men struggling in a confused mass before him. He kicked at them, forced them apart with a storm of oaths and blows. He saw that they had been trussing up a

"My father?" he cried out.

"There," said one of the men, pointing outside. "This one, this Fortier, stabbed him twice in the throat, m'sieu. He must have been quite dead before he fell across the rail. We fell on this one and stifled him—"

They drew back. For a moment Felix Macarty stood there in silence; under the veil of night his face could be seen only as a contorted mask of fury and passion. Twice he lifted the weapon in his hand as though to shoot the bound and motionless figure at his feet.

That figure moved slightly, with a wrenching motion. It moved as though the man inside those wrappings and bonds were sensible, knew what was going on, and were trying desperately to get free of his confinement. At the slight contortions, Felix Macarty laughed horribly, stepped forward, kicked the bound figure.

"Tie a weight to his feet," he said, "and throw him over. Quick!"

From the men came something not unlike a gasp of horror, of incredulous fear. But behind Felix Macarty uprose the figure of Petit Jean Hennepin, with an imperative gesture. The men saw that gesture, and obeyed.

They produced a weight of some sort, tied it to the recumbent, swathed figure. They hesitated, then—

"Over with it!" commanded Felix Macarty, his voice harsh.

Three of the men lifted that close-wrapped figure. In their hands it seemed to twist with a frightful effort, to be contorted as though a man were struggling in his bonds. A low, throaty noise came from it.

At this, Petit Jean made another imperative gesture. The three men dropped the body on the other side of the rail, then drew back quickly as though in horror of what they had done. There was a muffled splash, and then silence.

"So much for him!" said Felix Macarty. "Where'd he get the knife? How did he get free?"

Felix stepped to the rail and looked over at the indistinct ripples widening under the stars.

As he stood there, gazing down, the shadowy figure of Petit Jean approached behind him, making no sound. The long, keen-whetted knife flashed for an instant in the dull light of the stars.

Felix Macarty uttered no cry, but fell forward across the rail. The pistol fell from his hand. Petit Jean coolly caught the body and drew it back on deck.

At this instant there came a furious hammering and pounding from the door of the mate's cabin. Mr. Wright wanted to know what was going on, and said so in no uncertain terms.

The face of Petit Jean leaped into a grin of infernal delight. Snatching up the pistol that Felix had dropped, he slipped across the deck like a shadow. A moment later two reports reverberated across the water. The hammering at the cabin door ceased.

"Get up the anchor," said Petit Jean, his voice hoarse with exultation.

His men obeyed.

CHAPTER XVII

In the obscurity that precedes the dawn, the Watersprite moved away from her anchorage. Her engines purred into life. Petit Jean, standing in her tiny bridge-house, ordered full speed ahead. She leaped through the dark waters, down the bayou toward the open gulf.

Petit Jean summoned the four men who were on deck. One, who knew the waters, he placed in charge of the wheel. With the others following him, he sought the mate's cabin and unlocked the door. Mr. Wright had been shot twice through the body, and must have died at once. Petit Jean commanded his three followers to get rid of the body over the side, and turned to the little cabin of the steward, adjoining the galley.

Unlocking the door of the steward's cubby, Petit Jean flung it open. A light was going, and Solomon sat on the edge of his bunk, half dressed. He blinked up at the intruder, who inspected him with an amused scrutiny. Indeed, there was something ludicrous in the aspect of this pudgy little old man, gray hair tumbled about his blank, blue eyes, with just now a tinge of alarm in his expressionless face.

"The shots woke you up, did they?" queried Petit Jean.

"Why, sir," returned Solomon, wheezily, "I thought as 'ow I 'eard shots, yes, sir!"

The eyes of the other man suddenly blazed forth at him.

"I've taken over this boat," shot forth Petit Jean. "The Macartys are dead. I'm going to lay her up somewhere down the coast, today, and then skip out. The other men will loot her for their share. Come in with us on the deal—I'll give you two hundred cash and set you ashore safe. You know nothing, and you can't hurt us. What say?"

Solomon stared up, agape at this information.

"Dead!" he muttered. "The Macartys dead!"

"No talk," said Petit Jean. "Two hundred cash. Speak up, quick!"

Solomon recovered himself.

"Why, sir," he said, "that 'ere cash is a werry good argument. But I ain't so young as I was, sir, and I'd be werry sorry to be took up an' jailed, sir—"

"No danger," Petit laughed thinly. There was a diabolical edge to this laugh—of his—the sound of it made Solomon shiver slightly. "You're safe enough. No tales to be told, and there'll be no investigation until we're all scattered and safe. What say?"

"Why, sir," and Solomon bobbed his head. "I'll be werry 'appy to accommodate you, as the old gent said when 'e kissed the 'ousemaid. If so be, as I could touch a bit o' that 'ere cash, sir, and—"

With a slight sneer, Petit Jean drew a handful of bills from his pocket—money taken from the Macartys. He counted out a hundred dollars, and tossed the bills at Solomon.

"Now, get up and get busy," he snapped. "Throw some breakfast together. I'm going to snatch a bit of sleep. We ought to be out of the bayou in a couple of hours—by sunrise. Call me then."

"Yes, sir," returned Solomon humbly, stuffing the money into his pocket.

"Here's the key to Miss Laverne's cabin," Petit Jean threw a key at him. "Give her something to eat and drink, and mind you keep the door locked. I'll send for her later."

Solomon bobbed his head, and the figure of Petit Jean withdrew.

As for the outlaw, he went to the cabin of David Macarty, dropped on the bunk, and was instantly asleep. He was the only person aboard who knew of the existence of the jewels. He was quite safe, especially as his cabin door was locked. And in his sleep, an infernal smile played about his cruel, evil lips.

The crew, left in charge of the yacht, clumped together and talked in low tones. Terror of Petit Jean was upon them. They brought the engines down to slow speed, and let the yacht crawl along with the tide and current. At sight of Solomon, going about his duties, with his usual apologetic cheerfulness, they fell silent, watching him warily. They would have murdered him at the first hinted suspicion, for they were in panic at thought of the things which had taken place that night.

Dawn was breaking when Solomon finished his job of tidying up the saloon and getting things in shape. In the course of this work, he discovered on the floor a scrap of paper, which he examined and then pocketed.

Soon afterward, he brought food and hot coffee to the group of men about the wheel. The yacht was a little below the place where Wrexham's schooner had been concealed, and was several miles below the plantation. When the steward set down his burden, the helmsman threw a loop over the wheel and turned to snatch a cup of coffee. Solomon made his way back to the galley.

Calling up their comrade from the engine-room, the men ate and drank. The sullen mood fell away from them. Before the coming of the day, their panic vanished slowly.

"Better take the wheel yourself, Alcee," said one of the men, glancing at the shore. "She's making toward that mud flat—current swinging her, probably."

Alcee turned over the wheel, advanced the loop a spoke, and began to fill his pipe. The man who had just spoken leaped suddenly to his feet with an oath.

"Up with her, ye fool! We don't want to fetch up on that mud bank—"

All five men sprang up, in sudden astonishment and alarm. For the yacht was certainly headed directly for the right-hand bank of the bayou! Alcee threw off the loop and twirled the wheel. Into his sullen Cajun features came a look of bewilderment.

"She don't answer!" he complained. "She don't turn—"

"Tiller rope's busted!" cried somebody. "Shut off the engine—"

The engineer went leaping below. From the group of men broke a storm of oaths and curses as they realized that the move was useless. The yacht refused to answer her helm at all, and was now darting directly at the shore. There was a sudden thrum and throb as the engineer gained his post and threw the gears into reverse—but he was too late.

Before reverse propeller could take effect, the yacht gave a long and creepy shudder, as her keel nosed into the mud of the bottom. Her prow still a dozen feet from shore, she drove herself firmly into the mud, and stayed there. With each instant, the tide was running out fast. As the wild vibrations of the screw shook her and it became evident that her own power would not get her off, the men fell to cursing anew. The engine ceased work.

She carried no launch. Her small boat towed alongside from the gangway, and two other boats were chocked and in davits on the upper deck.

It was at this instant that Petit Jean Hennepin appeared on deck again.

"How did this happen?" he said, with an appearance of calmness.

"We don't know—the steering gear is broken—the tiller rope has parted—"

Hennepin's deceptive manner burst into a furious, demoniac storm of rage. He whipped out that knife of his and rushed at the five of them; foam touching his lips, wild oaths were on his tongue. In his eyes blazed the devil of murder.

Armed though they were, the five men broke before him in mad terror. They ran here and there, evading him, shouting hoarsely, leaping out of his course. In the way this murderous creature sent those five men running and screaming, was something horrible. Then, suddenly as he had let drive at them, Petit Jean halted, wiped his face, put away his knife.

"All right, curse you!" he cried hoarsely. "What's done can't be helped. Come here!"

They suspected some ruse, held off, watching him. Petit Jean cursed them, and began to make a cigarette; he walked to the rail, eying the shore and the water, then turned and beckoned.

They perceived that the madness had left him, and sullenly approached, albeit with much precaution. Now it was seen that a new change had come into the face of Petit Jean; the heretofore glittering eyes had become bloodshot, with a crimson murk.

"I shan't hurt you, little ones," he said, and laughed. "Come and do what papa says! You, too, and he stabbed at two of them with his finger, making them start back, "get into the boat, row up to the Laverne place, and bring me down a launch. If those niggers ask any questions, say that everybody has gone for a cruise, say anything you like! Better bring a canoe for yourselves, too."

"I'll be off as soon as you get back. Then you can loot what you want from the yacht here, and set fire to her. Understand?"

They assented, gradually regaining confidence in him.

"You other three," he went on, "stay aboard. Do what you like, but see that one of you remains on watch. If any boats pass and ask questions, say that we ran ashore and that M'sieu Macarty has gone to Latouche to get a large boat to pull us off. Let no one aboard. You understand?"

They assented again. Petit Jean watched them shrink from his lurid eyes, and smiled.

"I shall sleep for an hour; at the end of that time, waken me. The boat will heel over a little as the tide goes down. When the tide comes in again this afternoon, she will float. Do what you like with her—she is yours. But I advise you to loot and burn her at once. That is all. Off with you, now!"

He turned, walked back to the companionway, and vanished there.

The five men looked one at another, exchanged a shrug and a muttered word, and obeyed his orders in a species of dumb terror. Two got down into the trailing boat, and began to row her upstream. The other three conferred for a moment, then two of them went to their own quarters, for they gained little sleep the preceding night. Alcee, chosen to stay on watch, seated himself on the deck, took a fishing line from his pocket and cast it over the rail, and began to smoke his pipe.

The eastern sky broke into a flame as the new day arrived.

The ensuing hour dragged its slow length along without incident. The only busy man aboard the yacht was the steward, to whom the brooding Alcee paid no attention.

John Solomon, indeed, went about his work in an unconcerned and the yacht crawl along with the tide and current. At sight of Solomon, going about his duties, with his usual apologetic cheerfulness, they fell silent, watching him warily. They would have murdered him at the first hinted suspicion, for they were in panic at thought of the things which had taken place that night.

Dawn was breaking when Solomon finished his job of tidying up the saloon and getting things in shape. In the course of this work, he discovered on the floor a scrap of paper, which he examined and then pocketed.

Soon afterward, he brought food and hot coffee to the group of men about the wheel. The yacht was a little below the place where Wrexham's schooner had been concealed, and was several miles below the plantation. When the steward set down his burden, the helmsman threw a loop over the wheel and turned to snatch a cup of coffee. Solomon made his way back to the galley.

Calling up their comrade from the engine-room, the men ate and drank. The sullen mood fell away from them. Before the coming of the day, their panic vanished slowly.

"Better take the wheel yourself, Alcee," said one of the men, glancing at the shore. "She's making toward that mud flat—current swinging her, probably."

Alcee turned over the wheel, advanced the loop a spoke, and began to fill his pipe. The man who had just spoken leaped suddenly to his feet with an oath.

"Up with her, ye fool! We don't want to fetch up on that mud bank—"

All five men sprang up, in sudden astonishment and alarm. For the placid manner as though no sequence of tragedy had invested this yacht with a tragic veil of horror. He carried a tray to Aline Laverne's cabin, and was in there a long while, talking with her. When he came out, he was puffing at his clay pipe, and appeared quite satisfied with himself.

A little later, he returned for her tray and bore it to the galley. Then he went down the companionway again, but this time he was not smoking; this time he went directly to the cabin that had been occupied by David Macarty. The door was locked, but for a little the steward worked softly at the lock. Presently the door opened under his hand. He saw Petit Jean stretched out in the bunk, snoring lustily, and beside him was the automatic pistol taken from Felix Macarty.

After a time he was on deck again. Alcee, the man on guard, paid him no attention.

When the appointed hour had gone, Alcee went below and awakened Petit Jean by pounding at the door. Hennepin opened the door and came out, sleepily.

"Not back yet with the launch? Tell that fool steward to fetch me some coffee, here in the saloon cabin. Then stay on watch."

The man departed. Petit Jean went into the saloon and dropped into a chair at the table. He did not observe that the place had been tidied up, nor that the scrap of paper had disappeared from the floor. He was thinking of something else.

With the falling of the tide, the yacht had heeled over quite a little, so that her decks were inclined. The skylight above the saloon was pointing toward the eastern sky, and all the glory of the morning sunlight came through the clouded glass, filling the place with a diffused glare of light.

From his pocket, Petit Jean drew out the two little boxes, and set them on the table before him. He left them unopened. A moment later Solomon appeared, with a tray, and set coffee and fresh-made toast before the outlaw.

"Fetch M'sieu Laverne here in ten minutes," commanded Petit Jean, "and see to it that she does not go on deck instead."

"Yes, sir," returned Solomon, and disappeared.

Petit Jean wolfed the toast, gulped at the coffee, and then shoved the dishes back carelessly. With a quick catch of his breath, as though he had been awaiting this moment, he opened the smaller box and displayed the four great gems. He relapsed into a motionless silence, staring at them with new amazement.

If they had been glorious on the preceding evening under artificial light, now beneath the flood of new daylight they were splendid beyond words, indescribable in their beauty. Few men have ever looked with the pride of ownership upon four such jewels as these—the great black pearl lustrous as some lost star plucked from Erebus; the twin pink gem, luminous sister that reflected the rosy radiance of the morning; and the diamond that coruscated in its bitter, dazzling acerbity.

What did Petit Jean Hennepin see in these four precious things? Not money alone, nor beauty, nor rarity; none of these could have drawn into his face such a devil of inhumanity as was compelled there as he gazed! These things, which react alike on no two men, awakened all the beast in this man.

Did this evil spirit divine the lust and blood which these precious objects had aroused in the past, and would rouse again? Was it this which evoked into his face that frightful devil of malign virulence?

A movement attracted his attention. He looked up and saw Aline Laverne standing in the doorway.

Under his look, the face of the girl whitened. Yet her eyes did not lose that clear serenity which so distinguished her; she met his keenly piercing regard, and baffled it by the sheer magic of her virginal spirit. His eyes fell from hers.

"What do you want with me?" she asked quietly.

Petit Jean stirred a little. By an effort, he became composed. He came to his feet and stood gazing at her emerald-green dress. He looked at her eyes again, and now his gaze was quick and hard, terrible in its evil menace.

"I want you," he said, speaking the guttural patois which came naturally to his lips. "You shall go away with me now. You belong to me."

Perhaps he was astonished to find no fear, no terror, in her face. She was afraid, yes; the pulse at her throat, the quick color in her cheeks, betrayed inward fear, yet none showed in her eyes. And her voice was steady, cool—it maddened the brute before her.

ATTACKED BY A RHINOCEROS

Doctor Shelby Tells How He Killed the 'Huge Beast With a Snap Shot.

On one expedition—notable in my memory because I was unaccompanied by any other white men—I spied a huge rhinoceros under a fig tree not more than a hundred yards away, writes Doctor Shelby, the big game hunter.

As soon as the boys saw that rhino they grabbed up their loads, and started on down the trail.

I decided not to kill the huge beast, and was about to turn in my tracks, when he rushed me snorting and lowering his head.

He was upon me before I was in a position to shoot, so there was nothing to do but leap nimbly to one side.

He put on the brakes and almost stopped, then continued on down the trail in the wake of the porters. They were heavily loaded and would have difficulty in escaping, so I made up my mind I would have to kill him.

As I raised my rifle he was just turning a bend 20 yards down the trail. And, scarcely taking aim, I fired.

It was a snap shot for his body. I fancied that he lurched forward. At any rate, he disappeared around the bend and I could hear him rolling over and over down the trail, while the cries of a dozen or more terror-stricken natives rent the air.

I hurried forward. Around the bend I found loads scattered everywhere. Some boys had scrambled upon large rocks. Two had jumped into a tree.

Some had jumped aside. One of these had been bowled over by the rhino, which then rolled over him, but luckily the boy had fallen between two rocks, which received the ponderous weight of the beast instead.

IRVING OFFENDED SOCIETY

But Author of "Knickerbocker's History" Became So Famous He Couldn't Be Ignored.

Society's hauteur and pride in ancestry inspired Washington Irving to write his "Knickerbocker's History," which lacerated the sensibilities of the ancestor-worshipping New Yorkers, writes Mrs. John King Van Rensselaer, in the Ladies' Home Journal. Eventually Irving's fame became so great that the social system was obliged to accept the man who had affronted it.

Society's association with Irving did little to make it think more kindly of the professional writer. He was a moody man, subject to fits of sullen depression caused, the romantic said, by the death of his betrothed, Matilda Hoffman. He never married, and her picture always stood at his bedside. It is now in the New York Historical society.

English authors carried on the work of making their profession socially unpopular. One of the first of these to come to New York was Thomas Moore, then at the height of his fame. He was a lofty and superior little man, patronizing in his pleasant moments and at other times surprisingly rude. He snubbed New York society, which had welcomed him.

Dickens and Thackeray did nothing during their American tours to re-establish literary men in the good graces of society. They were scornful and caustic toward American institutions, even American aristocracy.

New Hardy Dwarf Lemon.

Introduction of a hardy dwarf lemon from China may result in extending the zone in which lemons can be commercially cultivated in this country, officials of the United States Department of Agriculture here believe. The promising oriental citrus fruit was sent to this country in 1903 by Frank N. Meyer, explorer for the bureau of plant industry. It was considered at that time that it might prove of value for house culture in the United States. The new lemon has, however, outgrown the earlier expectations. Tests in various parts of the country have shown that this Chinese dwarf is not only valuable as a house plant, but that it is much harder than the commercial varieties of lemons now grown. Its fruit is also of excellent quality.—Science Service.

New Steel Tempering Process.

Through a new process of tempering steel, chopping a cold crowbar into chunks with an ax or whittling a steel rod into shavings with a pocketknife are simple performances. In fact, it is claimed by the two investigators in the state of Washington that a steel ax and pocketknives tempered by the new process have actually been made to perform these seemingly impossible acts. The process consists in the use of certain chemicals in water or oil in the tempering vessel.

Auto Ads Take Freak Shapes.

For advertising purposes the wild business getter has never overlooked the possibilities of the automobile. Many are the cars with big painted signs on them proclaiming the advantages of some one's particular flour or the merits of so and so's cheese. They attract considerable attention, but in no way nearly as much as those freak-bodied automobiles designed to resemble a bottle or a shoe, or some such thing with the driver's compartment carefully concealed inside. Most of these are familiar sights, but it remained for a most novel of all—a miniature house on wheels. Perfect in every exterior detail, it represents a suburban residence, and when first sighted coming around a corner is startling.—New York Sun and Globe.

"Goodness!" I said. "What a haul that lucky bird has made!"

Like Looking at the Sun

Looking into one of the huge rotary kilns where the raw materials for cement are burned into clinker is just like looking at the noonday sun.

The terrific heat required makes a glare of light so intense that the glowing flame would temporarily blind you.

But borrow the workman's colored goggles to protect your eyes while you take another look into the kiln. Then you will see a tornado of powdered coal—or gas or spraying oil—bursting into a sheet of sun-white flame.

Into the other end of the kiln flow the powdered limestone and shale [clay]—the raw materials for cement.

As the slowly revolving kiln tumbles the materials about, they are subjected to gradually increasing heat. During their three-hour journey through this inferno, moisture and gases are first given off. Finally as the powdered materials reach the sunwhite flame, they half melt into glass-hard balls called "clinker." This clinker, an entirely new chemical compound, when finely powdered is portland cement.

Portland cement kilns consume great quantities of fuel—30 pounds of coal or its equivalent for each 94-pound sack of cement. For the whole cement making process the consumption of coal is approximately 50 pounds a sack—more than half a ton of coal to a ton of cement.

Daddy's Evening Fairy Tale

BY MARY GRAHAM BONNER
COPYRIGHT BY WESTERN NEWSPAPER UNION

MISS WITCH-HAZEL

"In the fall of the year," said Daddy, "there are yellow flowers to be seen on bushes which have large and thick leaves."

"These flowers are alongside of the twigs of these bushes and they are known as the Witch-Hazel flowers."

"There are some that flower in the spring but the ones of which I'm speaking flower in the fall."

"Miss Witch-Hazel Bush was dressed up in her very best, and very, very proud was she."

"I am going to have an exciting time next summer," she said.

"Instead of wearing a flowery dress I shall think only of fruit and I will shoot forth seeds as my fruit pods burst and in this way more witch-hazel shrubs will be able to grow up."

"I really live for that wonderful time when I can shoot forth these seeds. I shoot them some distance. It is most exciting."

"I hope you will always be able to recognize me—which means that I hope you will always be able to know who I am when you see me."

"One of the best ways of telling who I am is to see if my flowers have four yellow strap-shaped petals which come when my leaves are falling."

"My leaves are broad and have straight veins. My leaves and bark go to make up my namesake in the medicine closet."

"Yes, you've all heard of witch-hazel. Well, witch-hazel got its name from our family, for we make witch-hazel."

"We're not the kind either that creatures turn up their noses at as they do old castor oil and some of those disagreeable things."

"We're not to be swallowed. No indeed. That's where we are so nice."

"We don't go about with that manner which castor oil has as though to say: 'You'll be sick if you don't take us. Maybe we'll make you sick for awhile, but in the end we will make you well.'"

"We don't make anyone sick first. No, we're not like that. As I said, we don't want to be swallowed—I mean my Medicine Closet relative doesn't want to be swallowed."

"Witch-hazel was never supposed to be swallowed. No, it can be used for burns and sprains and all kinds of sore places. But it is never to be swallowed. Never, never."

"We help gentlemen after shaving—they can put our Medicine Closet Cousin over their faces and so keep their faces from feeling rough."

"Oh, we're very useful. Homes, in my opinion, aren't homes without us."

"We help headaches. We don't do people any harm either the way some horrid medicines will do."

"No, we're cool and pleasant when some of the drops of the Witch-Hazel family are put upon a big handkerchief and then put upon the aching head."

"No horrible swallowing of us! We're to be used outside and not taken inside!"

"So," said Daddy, "you may see Witch-Hazel shrubs some day and you will know that it is from the witch-hazel plants that witch-hazel comes and that Miss Witch-Hazel is going to shoot forth seeds from her fruit pods next summer. And, too, that she is already looking forward to that day!"

"Witch-Hazel Flowers."

Only Half the Pain.

Seven-year-old Johnnie was afflicted with earache, and screamed frantically with the pain.

"Hush, Johnnie, dear," said nurse soothingly. "Don't cry so; it only makes it worse. Remember how bravely baby Willie behaved when he had earache. He never cried like this."

"Him!" said Johnnie indignantly; "what does that baby know about earache? His ears aren't more than half as big as mine!"

Acute.

Two students on a train were telling about their ability to see and hear. The one says: "Do you see that barn over there on the horizon?"

"Yes."

"Can you see that fly walking around on the roof of that barn?"

"No, but I can hear the shingles crack when he steps on them."

Good Boy, All Right.

"I don't like you to play with that new boy," said Mrs. Jenkins. "I'm afraid he isn't a very good boy."

"Oh, yes, mother," said Joe, "he really is a very good boy. He's been in the reform school twice, and both times they let him out on account of good behavior."

NURSE FINDS A PERFECT REMEDY

"From my long experience as a nurse I do not hesitate to say that I consider Tanlac Nature's most perfect remedy," recently declared Mrs. I. A. Borden, 425 Pontius Ave., Seattle, Wash. Mrs. Borden is a graduate of the National Temperance Hospital, Chicago, and her wide experience in caring for the sick lends particular emphasis to her statement.

"I have used Tanlac exclusively for seven years in the treatment of my charity patients," continued Mrs. Borden, "and my experience has been that, for keeping the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels functioning properly and for toning up the system in general, Tanlac has no equal. Recently I had a woman patient who could not even keep water on her stomach for fifteen minutes. Six bottles of Tanlac fixed her up so she could eat absolutely anything. Another patient, a man, seemed unable to digest any food at all. Three bottles of Tanlac put him in such fine shape he went back to work. These two cases are typical. My confidence in Tanlac is unlimited."

Detours Bring Customers.

The motoring public is frequently annoyed by signs marked "Detour," which compel them to leave a good road for a bad one for some distance. They are even more annoyed when the new route is not properly marked out and as a result they sometimes get temporarily lost. A small boy upstate, quick to grasp the situation, fashioned a few detour signs of his own which he erected and which diverted traffic by his father's house.

Then he built in his front yard a small stand at which he sold ginger ale and lemonade to the thirsty and weary travelers and did a good business until the authorities removed the signs and the street once again became a rarely traveled thoroughfare. —New York Sun and Globe.

Great Britain lays claim to what is believed to be the longest-lived family in the world. They are seven in number—five sisters and two brothers. All are married. Dig New Bed for Isar River.

By changing the course of the Middle Isar river, Bavaria expects to make possible the development of an electric current totaling 480,000,000 watt hours a year, an output that will put the plant among the largest of the world. It is estimated that this use of water power will result in a saving of 500,000 tons of coal annually. In digging the river's new channel, 7,000 men were employed.

To Secretaries of Local Organizations

Why not let this newspaper save you labor?

Labor-saving devices are the modern methods.

They spell efficiency.

Why stay in the old rut?

This is what you have been doing for years—wasting your time and energy in sending out separate notices of meetings regarding your lodge to each member. This means that you have to address from 50 to 100 postal cards or envelopes in addition to preparing the notices for mailing out.

Why not put your notice in an advertisement under "Lodge Notices" in this paper? You could do it for $1.25 and save all that labor.

It's the modern way. It's the way most lodges are doing in the up-to-date communities.

What would be more interesting in this paper than a column or two of such notices? Your members would look for this feature in every issue.
And then, think of the labor it would save you.

Just write out one notice and bring it to us. That's all. Simple, isn't Pennsylvania Lutherans Prominent in Revolutionary Struggle, Arrival of Persecuted Saxons.

German Lutherans, destined to be the strongest element in the development of the Lutheran Church in America, were the last in coming. It was in 1709 that the great influx of German Lutherans into New York and Pennsylvania began. In 1734 the Lutheran Salzburger, driven from their homes in Austria, settled in Georgia. Henry Melchior Muhlenberg, who arrived in 1742, gathered the scattered Lutherans into churches and became the founder of the Pennsylvania Ministerium in 1748. Before the Revolution Lutheran churches were found throughout the colonies.

HENRY MELCHIOR MUHLENBERG
First President of Oldest Lutheran Synod in America.

Men prominent in the affairs of the country were numbered among their members.

When the war began it was Muhlenberg's eldest son, John Peter Gabriel, serving a Lutheran congregation in Virginia, who gave notice to his congregation of his intention to go to war, and at the close of his farewell sermon uttered the historic words, "There is a time to preach and a time to fight, and now the time to fight has come," and then, throwing back his clerical robe, he stood before the congregation in a colonel's uniform, and the next day was off to the war.

New life was infused into the Lutheran Church in this country by the arrival, late in the thirties, of loyal Lutherans from Saxony. They left their fatherland, their homes, their kindred for conscience's sake because they could not remain where they were not allowed to preach and teach the old faith. The company numbered 750 souls. Their heroic faith and devotion to Christ and His truth were manifested also in this, that, patterning after the Apostolic Church, they turned all their possessions into cash and placed the proceeds into one common treasury. The total capital was nearly ninety-three thousand dollars.

They settled in Missouri, and in 1847, under the leadership of C. F. W. Walther, F. Wyneken, Wm. Sihler and others, founded the Synod of Missouri, Ohio and other States, which ever since has stood for conservative, confessional Lutheranism. And so, on account of differences of language and locality, in which these scattered Lutherans were gathered together, as well as some doctrinal or practical differences, a number of Lutheran Synods arose. They in turn during the last half century have been uniting into larger bodies. The conservative Missouri Synod has grown to be the largest of the Synods.

THE SECRET OF WHY SOME MEN OBTAIN CREDIT, BUT OTHERS CAN'T

Various Meanings of Credit—The Way Character Begets Confidence and Opens the Way to Trust—Thrift and Honesty the Basis of Banking.

The secret of why some men can readily obtain credit, while others are unable to borrow a cent, is disclosed in the present article prepared by the Committee on Public Education of the American Bankers Association. It tells an interesting story of how a man of forty, of good reputation and fair success, was nonplussed by his inability to borrow and had to pass up a good opportunity.

Banks are said to deal in credit. The word "credit" has various meanings. When you deposit money, your account receives "credit" for that amount. When a man borrows money on his note at the bank, he is granted "credit." When a railroad, a manufacturing concern, a town, or a government, issues bonds, it uses its "credit." When anyone buys goods without paying cash, at the time of purchase, "credit" is granted. Without credit, our present day business system could not exist.

Credit is possible only where people have confidence in each other, and confidence can exist only where good character exists. Every successful business man looks upon his credit standing as a most valuable asset, and he maintains it by square dealing. To get credit a man must pay his debts, or it soon becomes known he is not of good character and not worthy of confidence. Those from whom he would buy refuse to trust him and the banks decline to grant him credit. Then come business failure and a long uphill fight to get on his feet again and live down the past.

More Than Honesty Needed

Honesty is not the only factor involved in credit. For instance, Mr. Jones, a man of forty, of excellent morals, who has enjoyed a fair income for many years, sees an opportunity to purchase a business. He requires financial assistance. He calls on a banker and asks for the necessary credit. The banker asks the nature of the business, what it will cost, and what Mr. Jones can command in ready money, or other resources, but learns that he has no money or property of his own.

It is clear that Mr. Jones lacks ability to manage his affairs wisely. He has not had enough strength of character to save money by adapting expenses to income, and therefore has not proved that he could make financial progress. Moreover, if men do not invest some of their own money in the business they usually lack incentive and become easily discouraged. It would be unwise for anyone to assume such a financial risk, and Mr. Jones probably would fail to get credit from the bank. He must give up his opportunity to some one else who has saved money.

Banks are public servants, but that does not obligate them to serve those who are unfair in business or lacking in the great principles underlying success. To be known as a careful and thrifty person is the best assurance that the bank will extend financial help when needed.

Many people think that one should shun debt like the measles. They fail to distinguish between wise and unwise debt. It is wise to use credit, that is, go into debt, to buy a home. Such debt encourages thrift. A student may wisely borrow money needed to complete his education. It is an investment that should pay dividends in greater success. Another wise use of credit is borrowing to buy good bonds, such as Liberty Bonds, paying $20 down, borrowing $80 from the bank, and paying it off out of savings.

When to Shun Debt

There are circumstances, however, under which one should never borrow money. Never incur a debt in a speculative venture. OF THE PEOPLE WHO SPECULATE, NINETY-FIVE PER CENT LOSE. Neither should debts be incurred to purchase pleasure-giving possessions. Such debts are millstones around the necks of countless families.

Progressive banks adhere to the same standards they exact of their patrons. Their business methods must be beyond reproach. They exclude business of doubtful reputation and have no part in the feverish struggle for sudden wealth. Well-managed banks are regarded with great respect, and hold a place of ever increasing importance.

Some thoughtless persons criticize banks for not making loans more freely but it must be remembered that a bank's business is to receive deposits as well as to grant loans, and it is therefore the trustee of money belonging to others. It must safeguard its depositors' funds and so control them as to be always ready to return them intact upon demand. That requires great care in granting credits.

THE MORTALITY OF SAVINGS ACCOUNTS

The Savings Banks Association of Massachusetts has issued a tabulation made by a mutual savings bank in an average New England town showing that, of the accounts opened during a six months period, 85 to 90 per cent were open at the end of the period. At the end of the next six months about 70 per cent were open. At the end of one year about 60 per cent were open; at the end of 18 months about 55 per cent; at the end of three years about 50 per cent; and then the figure rather steadily declined by 2 to 3 per cent of the original number each year. At the end of ten years about 25 per cent of the accounts were still open. After that the changes were very small, mostly on account of death.

Federal Reserve Copied

Peru is the first country in Latin America to reorganize its banking system according to Federal Reserve principles by the enactment of the Federal Reserve Act of Peru to develop the country's resources along modern lines of financing. Peru's new banking system is modeled after the United States Federal Reserve, with modifications such as the banking conditions and general financial situation there require. It provides for the creation of a Federal Reserve Bank in Peru. The directorate of this bank is to be composed of nine members, three of whom are to be designated by the Government and the other six are to be elected by the member banks.

Thrills Made to Order in the Movies

HANGING by the heels on a 6-inch ledge with the street cavern yawning 12 stories below is no trick at all—in the movies. Missing a foothold on the edge of a tall building and being caught by the hands of a clock 10 floors above the earth, however, contains almost as many thrills for the actor as it does for the spectators.

For these are the days of realism in pictures, the result of a ceaseless demand on the part of a public long accustomed to seeing speeding automobiles plunge over steep cliffs, death-defying leaps into a raging surf, and airplane crashes, for more thrills.

In some cases "doubles" are employed to take the place of the star for the more hazardous undertakings. Dressed and made up to resemble the actor, they brave death in leaps from speeding trains to airplanes, jump over cliffs, and ride motorcycles into locomotives with no chance of winning either fame or glory.

Many risks, however, are taken by the stars. In one instance, during the filming of a western melodrama, the heroine was called upon to plunge into an icy mountain torrent and float downstream toward a cataract.

It had been found by experiment that the current would carry floating objects to a sand bar just above the falls, and a watcher was stationed there to pull her from the water as she swept past. But, instead, the current swept her to the other side of the stream and she would have been dashed over the falls to certain death had not her secretary rescued her.

In making a picture of a man climbing the side of a building and doing apparently perilous stunts many floors above the street, a real building was selected and a circus performer employed to double for the actor in the "long shots." Then a fake building was built on top of the real one. The "set" was built in far enough so that the roof would break any fall and also would provide a platform for the camera. By "shooting" at a proper angle, however, the drop to the street looked straight down.

Use Iron to Float Logs of Heavy Wood to Sea

In logging timber tracts in South America and the West Indian islands, the heavier wood, which is not sufficiently light to float, has always proved difficult to move. One firm recently solved this problem by using "floaters," made of rust-resisting iron, by means of which the heavy timber was rafted down a river to the sea.

Keyless Auto Lock Acts When Car Is Stopped

Besides automatically blocking the ignition when the car is stopped, a keyless automobile lock positively holds the steering gear. There are no keys to forget, as the device is fitted to the steering post and operates with 10 buttons. It may be set with any number up to 10, and the combination may be changed as often as desired. When a button is touched to shut off the ignition, the car is automatically locked and cannot be operated again until the combination is worked.

Preventing Stream Erosion

Along many streams it is necessary to hold the bank back in some efficient and cheap manner, otherwise the ground will be washed away. An excellent method of preventing this is shown in the drawing. A woven-wire fence is erected where the new water edge is to be made, the fence posts being driven into the bed of the stream. Brush and saplings are then deposited as indicated, the branches pointing away from the water, and the built-in fence on the brush to make the wall solid, and in a short time the new bank is knit together by marsh grasses and rushes.

THE UNIVERSAL CAR

New Sedan

Changes featured in the new Ford Sedan make it a better looking, roomier car.

A higher radiator with a trim apron at its base lends dignity befitting a closed car. The higher hood and enlarged cowl curving gracefully to the dash give a stylish sweep to its body lines, and afford additional leg room for occupants of the front seat.

All body fittings—window regulators, door grips, door latch levers, door lock, dome light—are finished in nickel. The upholstery carries a fine dark line on a soft brown background that does not easily show dust or dirt. Silk window curtains to harmonize for the three rear windows enhance the style of the car and add to the comfort of its passengers. See the new Sedan and other new Ford body styles at our showroom.

CHALLENGING the delegates at the W. C. T. U. National Convention, in Columbus, O., to a new crusade, Miss Anna A. Gordon, world and national president of that organization, said, "On the victorious battleground of the Crusade State we are to let the mighty memories of thousands of crusade marching mothers influence us. So shall we more adequately meet the challenge of the old crusade by the march of the new crusade—a 'March of Allegiance' to the polling booths of 1924."

It was announced at the convention that in the special membership campaign just ended, more than 25,000 new members joined the W. C. T. U., of which 5,050 were reported by Ohio.

Public Service and Community Growth

"The greater the degree of ownership of public utilities by local citizens, the greater opportunity the community will have for growth and development.

"Every dollar paid out in dividends to local stockholders remains at home in the community where it was produced; such dividends are added to the local wealth rather than going to the development of some outside community."

Every three months post offices in more than 180 communities in the territory served clear dividend checks to stockholders of this Company. What the World Is Doing

Air Chamber Saves Divers Stricken at Work

As a first-aid appliance to save the lives of divers stricken at their work, a large steel tank, in which they are placed, is filled with compressed air to break up and drive out bubbles of gas that cause them to become paralyzed or unconscious. The pressure is started at 30 pounds and increased or decreased as the patient needs it. Even though a constant supply of air is pumped below to a diver at work, the great weight of the water and too long periods underseas frequently overcome him, making quick action necessary to prevent his death.

Animal So Small It Lives in a Drop of Water

So tiny that it can be seen only by aid of a magnifying glass, an animal, heretofore unknown, has been discovered by an eastern scientist. By means of whiplash strokes of hairlike projections covering its body it can move rapidly about in a drop of water. The little creature feeds chiefly on germs and other animals living in the water. It measures about one two-hundredths of an inch long and is less than one-fourth as wide.

Huge Blimp to Circle World

The large dirigible airship "ZR-1," now under construction for the U. S. Navy, will be sent on a trip around the world when completed this fall, and may later go to the north and south poles. This ship, and the "ZR-3" that is being built in Germany for the navy, the first rigid dirigibles for this country, represent the most improved features in airship design. They will be filled with helium, the non-inflammable gas that is available in large quantities only in the United States.

Pacific's Bottom Is Charted by Timing Sound Waves

Charting the bottom of the Pacific ocean between United States and Australia is the task of a navy cruiser using a delicate apparatus to measure the time required for sound to pass from the surface of the water to the ocean's bed and return. Records are taken every five miles while the boat is moving. Knowing the speed of sound through water and the time elapsing between sending and returning of a signal serves to compute the depth.

Safety Seat Prevents Falls While Washing Windows

For preventing falls while washing windows in the home, a safety seat has been made which swings on two chains attached to hooks in the window frames. A strap stretched between the chains supports the worker's back in comfort, at the same time acting as a guard against loss of balance, leaving the body free for movements required in the cleaning.

Basket on Pole Hives Bees Safely

A Wisconsin beekeeper, whose general farm work allows very little time for capturing the swarms that escape his apiary, has found the method illustrated both easy and quick. The device used for the work, he claims, has saved him many hours of labor as well as numerous painful stings.

The device is simple to make. It consists of a circular rim and a supporting fork made of 1/2-in. iron rod, and a cone-shaped screen-wire basket attached to the rim as shown. A stout cane fishpole is used for a handle.

When the bees swarm, they usually alight in one of the trees of the orchard, and often at such a height that it is almost impossible to capture them. As soon as the swarm is located and fairly settled, the basket is raised under the swarm and shaken so that most of the bees will drop into it. Of course, many bees escape but they will return to the swarm and cluster on the outside of the basket. When all is quiet again, the basket is lowered in front of an empty hive and the bees are induced to enter their new home.

It takes 61 days' work a year to pay the taxes of every producer in the United States, it is estimated. In 1921, taxes consumed 16.7 of all value produced in this country.

Figures Show That Marriage Makes Men More Successful

IS that workily wise maxim to the effect that "he travels fastest who travels alone" to go the way of other exploded fallacies? Is it, in the modern competitive struggle, the married man who more frequently succeeds?

Statisticians of the Phoenix Mutual Life Insurance Company recently had occasion to study this question, to sift the evidence in hundreds of cases. They found that the married man has the best chance to succeed. Among every hundred married men whose records were examined 59 had advanced so steadily that success was stamped upon their careers. Forty-one had "failed to make the grade." Among the single men, however, the failures outbalanced the successes. Fifty-one made records that were mediocre or worse, while 49 had succeeded.

The SANDMAN STORY

THE LOST MOUSE

ONCE there was a white mouse who traveled with a circus. He had pink eyes and long white whiskers and he belonged to a clown. When the clown was walking about the ring of the circus he would pull the white mouse out of his pocket and let him run up and down his sleeve and pretend to be very much afraid of the mouse, and the mouse would pretend to bite his ear and they were very happy together. All the children used to laugh and shout when they saw the tiny thing on the arm of the clown, and the people in the back rows would crane their necks and try to see what was happening away down below.

But one day the white mouse slid through a hole in the pocket of the clown's ragged coat and got lost. He looked and looked for his friend, the clown, but he could not find him, so he set out in the world for himself. He ran across the circus ring and frightened the big elephants nearly into fits, then he ran faster and faster along the sawdust ring and at last came to the edge of the tent under the rows of seats. Outside the tent was the great world which the white mouse had always wanted to see for himself.

"I Am Going to Speak to Him."

The great world was so big that it frightened the little white mouse.

"My goodness," he said, "the sky is even farther away than the roof of the circus tent. Isn't that funny?" And he went on whistling to himself through his long white whiskers, to keep up his courage.

Before long he came to a house, though he did not know what it was. "What a queer brown thing, bigger than an elephant," he said to himself, stopping his whistle in amazement. "Now I wonder what's the use of that?"

He was a brave little white mouse, so he hurried to find out what the big brown thing was, for he had never been inside a house. Luckily for him there was no dog and no cat in the house, for he quite forgot to be careful. In front of the big brown house there was a big hole, which was a door, although he did not know it was a door. But he knew that holes could be gone through, so in he went.

Inside the big brown house there lived a family of very well-behaved mice, brown, all of them, who never made a noise in the walls at night or nibbled the loaves of bread in the pantry.

They were always on the watch for what was going on in the big house and so it happened they saw the white mouse just as he came in the door and they nearly tumbled over themselves in their astonishment, for they had never before seen a white mouse.

The brown mice crowded to the edge of the mousehole, peering at the white mouse and I expect they felt very much the way the poor Indians did when they saw a white man for the first time.

At last one of the bravest of them said: "I am going to speak to him, he has whiskers just like ours and a tail just like ours and eyes just like ours; maybe he fell in the milk pan and could not get it washed off."

"I don't believe that," said the sister of the brave brown mouse, her little nose wiggling in a funny way. "He looks white all the way through."

When the brown mouse who was brave enough to speak to the stranger said, "Can I do anything for you, sir?" in his very grandest manner,

David Powell

Born in Glasgow, Scotland, of Welsh parentage, is the proud claim of David Powell, well-known star in motion pictures. Before entering the "movies" he had had several years of stage experience. He is distinguished as one of the best leading men of the day and has achieved world-wide reputation for his ability as an actor, his finesse, intelligence and general air of good breeding.

Little white mouse stared, for you see little white mouse had never seen just an ordinary mouse before.

But at last he got over his fright and brown mouse persuaded him to come into his wall home and when brave brown mouse's sister told white mouse how nice it was to live there he decided he would not try to find his way back to the circus tent.

And so one night there was a wedding in the walls of the brown house and little white mouse and pretty little brown mouse set up housekeeping and some time you may be surprised by seeing a white mouse run along close to the wall of the room where you happen to be sitting, and if you do, perhaps it will be one of the children who looks like its father, little white mouse, who ran away from the circus tent a long time ago. The Right Thing at the Right Time

By MARY MARSHALL DUFFEE

THE UNWELCOME RAP

IN PERFECT fairness anyone has a perfect right to ring your front bell or knock at your door. An agent who comes to try to sell you flavoring extract may annoy you if he comes to call you to the door in the midst of a busy round of housework or when you are receiving callers, but he has really committed no offense. You owe him at least a definite but courteous refusal to buy.

There is always an effective way to dismiss an unwelcome caller without being rude. There are ways of rebuking admittance as effective as slamming the door in an intruder's face. If an agent comes and you feel that he is taking an undue length of time in stating the object of his call, you are entitled to interrupt him and ask courteously: "Will you please tell me briefly what I can do for you? I am very busy."

"I am sorry but I do not wish any," is a very definite but courteous way of dismissing the would-be sales person or you may add: "To detain you would only be wasting your time as well as my own, as I cannot make any purchases."

Sometimes housewives listen for half an hour to the glib speech of a persistent agent and then when at last the agent goes without having made any sales they blame, not themselves for having detained the agent and wasted their own time, but the agent. Now no agent ever really remains to take your time unless he feels that there is at least a chance of your purchasing his goods. And there is always a way politely to convince even the most brazen of agents that you will not possibly buy. It is never the part of kindness to yield to the request that you listen to an agent's sales talk when you know that there is not a chance of your ultimate purchase. "What's in a Name?"

By MILDRED MARSHALL

FACTS about your name; its history; meaning; whence it was derived; significance; your lucky day and lucky jewel

CORINNE

CORINNE has been in vogue in America for so many years that her distinguished French origin has almost been forgotten. Seldom does a deliberately foreign name receive such welcome or such permanent popularity. The Greek is responsible for the earliest source of Corinne, the name coming probably from Persephone's title, "Kore," a maiden, which was applied to the Boetian poetess, who won a wreath of victory at Thebes.

But unlike many of the ancient favorites connected with the brightest lights of the old world, this name persisted and when ambitious writers, eager for a heroine, delved into early history, Corinna was salvaged and put into current use. Mme. de Staël created the brilliant Corinne, heroine of the novel of that name, and insured her immortality. French damsels beyond number adopted the name, while in Italy, Corinna appeared in an early chronicle of the Middle Ages, relating the story of the lady best known as Rowena, daughter of Henghist.

The war-hued carnelian is Corinne's talismanic stone. It will protect her against danger and disease and will give her courage and poise. It is said to be particularly lucky for those who sing, since it makes the voice sweet and strong. Wednesday is her lucky day and 1 her lucky number.

MEN YOU MAY MARRY

By E. R. PEYSER

Has a man like this proposed to you?

Symptoms: There's the man who has made his pile. He is hale and hearty, restless and has retired from business. His mother thinks he has been an exemplary son. His sister has never gone without a thing that he could get for her. His small brother has had the careful care that only a big brother could give him. He is good looking, but appears unsatisfied. He believes he ought to get married. His spinster friends believe he should get married. Even his bachelor friends have prescribed marriage. He seems restless, even after proposing to you. He has spent his life in the closest application to work. You can't find anything in which he is interested. He tells you he is sick of baseball; golf is an old man's game; art is not in his line; cards he never liked and why should he take it up now? Reading is futile, for the books are so poor; hunting is a tax on a man of forty; and so on.

IN FACT

He is the greatest tax on himself.

Prescription for His Wife:

Prescription for His Wife: You must get carloads of poise and control from somewhere! He wants you because he thinks you will make him less fidgety. Dig up new pastimes he has never had a chance to condemn. Make him enthusiastic even over collecting pebbles.
